NTA Winning ‘Dream Team’ Now Available to Create Bespoke e-Learning Content

Course-Source and Virtual Pedagogue, the team that won a prestigious National Training Award for designing and developing an online course training medics in a life-saving alternative to blood transfusion, have strengthened their partnership, teaming up to develop high quality bespoke e-learning content for when off-the-shelf training content just doesn't meet client demand.

Having incorporated Virtual Pedagogue's workforce into its own team, Course-Source is now able to build complete, engaging e-learning systems from scratch; re-engineer classroom or other off-line training courses into e-learning programmes; design additional 'add-on' e-learning modules and provide new or additional assessment elements – whatever the subject matter. All bespoke courses can be integrated into the Course-Source LMS which has Web 2.0 technology.

Course-Source's new partnership means the company has twenty years' experience of creating bespoke e-Learning content and is also able to offer training courses and workshops for clients who wish to use the latest rapid development authoring tools to create their own e-learning programmes.

Course-Source will continue to provide the full range of e-Learning services for which it has become renowned, and the company's status as the provider of the widest range of UK-produced generic e-courseware will not change.

The online blood transfusion training project that won acclaim from National Training Award judges was rolled out nationally by UK Blood and Tissue Services and is now available to all NHS Primary Care Trusts.
